ABSTRACT

This guide to the archives of the Tennessee College Women's Sports Federation (TCWSF), now dissolved, details the contents of the 13 cartons of materials which constitute the TCWSF collection. Materials are organized into series under particular topics. The guide describes the arrangement of documents in each series and then lists the contents of each container. The eight archival series are: (1) TCWSF Administrative Series (organizational and administrative documents); (2) TCWSF Ethics and Eligibility Series (applications and correspondence, protests, violations, complaints and appeals, and statistical information on players, scholarships and championships); (3) TCWSF Tournament Series (programs, financial statements, correspondence, score sheets etc.); (4) Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW) Southern Region II Series (administrative and tournaments documentation); (5) AIAW Series (administrative, tournament and legal materials regarding AIAW); (6) Women's Sports Organization Series (correspondence, directories, guidelines, etc. from various women's organizations); (7) State Series (constitutions, guidelines and handbooks of states other than Tennessee); and (8) Publication Series (miscellaneous periodicals and publications). The guide also includes a narrative history of TCWSF detailing its origins, developments and achievements. Also included are lists of TCWSF officers and member schools and profiles of Federation presidents. (JB)

INTRODUCTION TO THE TENNESSEE COLLEGE WOMEN'S SPORTS FEDERATION ARCHIVES

The Association for intercollegiate Athletics for Women (AIAW) was dissolved after the organization lost its anti-trust suit and appeal against the National Collegiate Athletic Association (NCAA) on July 1, 1983. Thereafter, the Tennessee College Women's Sports Federation (TCWSF) was also dissolved.

Member institutions agreed to use the remaining resources of the Federation to organize the TCWSF archives. Jane Hooker of Memphis State University was awarded a $3,645 grant to oversee the organization of the archives, publish the library finding aid to the collection, and distribute it to member institutions and their libraries, Southern Region II archives, and AIAW national archives.

On April 20, 1983, Jane Hooker donated nine cartons of materials to the Mississippi Valley Collection in John Willard Brister Library at Memphis State University. These materials were collected while she served as TCWSF secretary-treasurer (1975-78); president-elect (1976-77); president (1977-79); and historian (1972-83). Included in this original collection were: correspondence, minutes of governing boards and assemblies, financial records, handbooks, newsletters, tournament records, and miscellaneous items from various women's organizations relevant to the Federation and its members.

Betty-Erle Rhodes, a Memphis State University Library Science graduate assistant was hired to process the collection with assistance from Jane Hooker. The archives were processed in a simple chronological order and a temporary finding aid was prepared. According to the provisions of the Deed Gift Agreement, the collection (with the exception of restricted ethics materials) was to be open for research in September 1983. This was delayed until 1986 when ethics materials would no longer be restricted and when numerous missing materials could be located and organized within the initial files.

Between 1983 and 1988 three more cartons of materials were received from former TCWSF presidents Bettye Giles, Elma Roane, Nancy Lay, Jean Biddle, Nadine Gearin, Sharon Brown, and Patricia Bonner. Charlotte Peterson and Anna Ley Ingraham contributed additional financial and tournament records.

Betty-Erle Rhodes, then on the Memphis/Shelby County Public Library staff, was hired to continue the collection as her time permitted. Funds were allocated to pay her by the hour. In order to coordinate the TCWSF collection with the Inventory of the AIAW Southern Region Archives, housed at Eastern Kentucky University, all of the additional items plus the ethics materials have been incorporated into one collection.

The Deed of Gift, correspondence, and other related items concerning the TCWSF Archives are located in Box 1, Folder 1. Duplicate copies of handbooks, minutes, etc with manuscript notes are included even though the notes have not always been identified. The item count on some of the folders will be incorrect because materials were added at different times.

The TCWSF Handbooks and Newsletters are good sources for annual information pertaining to officers, member institutions, guidelines, sports policies and procedures, and tournament results.

Information pertaining to the NCAA Governance Plan 1975-1981 and AIAW v NCAA 1981-1983 is located in Box 9, Folders 41-47. Relevant information pertaining to the dissolution of TCWSF is found in Box 1, Folders 18-20.

The guide to the Tennessee College Women's Sports Federation Archives was published and distributed in November 1990. Michele Fagan, Mississippi Valley Collection curator, Betty-Erle Rhodes, processor, and Jane Hooker, grant director assisted in the final draft of the guide. The guide to the collection is located in Box 1, Folder 1.

TENNESSEE COLLEGE WOMEN'S SPORTS FEDERATION A HISTORICAL SKETCH

The idea for an association to promote and organize sports for college women came to fruition in October, 1968 during the annual meeting of the Tennessee College Physical Education Association (TCPEA) held at Montgomery Bell State Park. Many of the collegiate female physical education teachers from Tennessee as well as their counterparts in adjacent states had been informally organizing so-called extramural teams since the late fifties.

Several Tennessee invitational tournaments were organized during this period. The most notable were the annual volleyball tournaments at East Tennessee State University and Memphis State University. A state tournament in tennis had been organized during the late sixties with Vanderbilt University as the host school. David Lipscomb College and Memphis State University were noted for their mid-south badminton tournaments. These co-ed events usually offered open and collegiate competition as well as A and B divisions to encourage more play. Increased participation was eminent as the desire for competition spread through the colleges. There were entry waiting lists for some of these tournaments. The time was ripe to formally organize.

Several college female physical education teachers, coaches of extramural teams, and graduate students met that October to consider forming an organization to promote intercollegiate competition and provide state championships in a variety of sports for women. Although there was not sufficient time to define specific policies of such an organization there was unanimous agreement to pursue this new and exciting venture. Bettye Giles from the University of Tennessee at Martin had acted as spokesperson and was asked to publicize and plan another similar meeting in the near future.

The second organizational meeting was held during the Southern District Association of Health, Physical Education, and Recreation Convention in Memphis, February 22, 1969. The formal name of Tennessee College Women's Sports Federation (TCWSF) was recommended and a committee composed of two representatives from the three grand divisions of the state was formed.

Representatives selected were: Patricia J. Bonner, Milligan College, and Jo Hobson, University of Tennessee, Knoxville from East Tennessee; Anna Ley Ingraham, George Peabody College and Carolyn Landreth, Middle Tennessee State University from Middle Tennessee; and Bettye L. Giles, University of Tennessee at Martin and Nancy McIntosh, Memphis State University from West Tennessee. Their charge was to formulate a constitution with by-laws, to survey the present status of intercollegiate sports for women in Tennessee colleges, and to survey the future needs of the organization.

A brief meeting was held in conjunction with an already organized State Tennis Tournament in Nashville on May 9, 1969. The results of the survey were discussed and the committee recommended that the tennis tournament which had been organized the year before, be continued under TCWSF sanction for the following year. Preliminary plans were made for a fall TCWSF volleyball tournament to be directed by Anna Ley Ingraham of George Peabody College.

All Tennessee college female physical education teachers interested in organizing sports for females were invited to attend an October, 1969 meeting held in conjunction with the TCPEA at Montgomery Bell State Park. At this meeting the name of TCWSF was formally adopted. The first official TCWSF state championship to be offered was volleyball. It was approved for November 1969, at George Peabody College in Nashville. Bettye Giles was elected acting chair and Patricia Bonner was elected acting secretary-treasurer.

The constitution, by-laws, policies, and a five dollar institutional membership fee were also presented and approved by the group in attendance. Some of the policies and by-laws were as follows:

1. Membership open to undergraduate two, four, five year colleges.
2. TCWSF district and state tournaments open only to members.
3. DGWS guidelines and sport rules were adopted for use.
4. Participants must be full-time, 2.0 G.P.A., amateur.
5. No athletic scholarships to be given.
6. Social event to be planned at each competition.
7. No recruitment to enhance institution's athletic program.

At a meeting held in conjunction with the first Tennessee Association for Health, Physical Education and Recreation (TAHPER) State Convention December 6, 1969, acting chairman, Bettye Giles gave a progress report of the newly formed TCWSF at a Division of Girls and Women's Sports luncheon (DGWS). A governing board was elected by the group in attendance. Because of pressing business the newly elected officers, governing board, and one representative from ten different colleges agreed to meet in Cookeville at the Holiday Inn on January 31, 1970.

At this historic meeting the final revisions of the constitution were made and approved and the Tennessee College Women's Sports Federation was offically born. Bettye Giles, University of Tennessee at Martin was elected the first chairman and Patricia Bonner, Milligan College was elected the first secretary-treasurer. Connie Mynatt of East Tennessee State University was appointed the DGWS Advisor to the organization.

Sport policies in volleyball, tennis, badminton, and basketball were drawn up and were later edited and approved through a mail vote. A tentative state tournament schedule was approved for 1970-71 for volleyball, badminton, basketball, and tennis. A rotation schedule for state tournament sites was implemented.

At the October 1970 meeting in conjunction with TCPEA, Jean Biddle from the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga replaced Patricia Bonner on the governing board and Betty Watson from Jackson State Community College replaced Bettye Giles. Harriette Lavenue from Memphis State University was elected state DGWS Chairman, which was now a TCWSF ex-officio office. There were now two officers, six governing board members, an ex-officio officer, and eighteen charter members.

Charter institutions included: Austin Peay State University, Columbia State Junior College, David Lipscomb College, East Tennessee State University, Jackson State Community College, Lane College, Lambuth College, Martin

College, Maryville College, Memphis State University, Middle Tennessee State University, Milligan College, George Peabody College, Tennessee Technical University, Tusculum College, University of Tennessee at Chattanooga, University of Tennessee at Knoxville, and the University of Tennessee at Martin.

During the following twelve years the membership grew from eighteen to thirty-one colleges and universities. At its dissolution there were only fourteen AIAW members. There were no junior college members during the last five or six years as they had pulled out to become members of the National Junior College Athletic Association (NJCAA).

Periodically it was necessary to change the organizational framework of the governing board to meet the diverse needs of the membership. Several junior colleges were members and during the 1974-75 ear a Junior College Representative was added to the governing board to represent their concerns. In 1979-80 the Federation's membership changed from a junior college-university composition to primarily a large-small college arrangement. Later a Division I, II, and III structure with divisional representatives was implemented to correspond with the organizational structure of AIAW. During Nadine Gearin's term as chairman, 1975-76, a two-year term for the chairman was reinstated and the title of chairman was changed to president in 1976-77. Communication and continuity were primary concerns during this period of development and frequent change.

As the Federation expanded it was necessary to add other officers and services. In 1972-73 Jane Hooker, Memphis State University was appointed the first and only historian and served as an ex-officio member of the board. Her primary duties were to collect and preserve the records of the Federation.

Basketball and volleyball were rapidly becoming more competitive and the level of play required more experienced officials. Securing and adequately paying nationally rated NAGWS officials were high priorities although tournament gate receipts were sometimes insufficient to pay for them. Tournament entry fees were charged to help defray this enormous expense. The practice of securing rated officials was quite an improvement over the initial year when participating teams were required to bring an official with or without tournament experience or rating. Nancy Lay was appointed officials coordinated in 1972-73 to help establish some consistency in techniques of officiating in the three grand divisions of the state. Officiating clinics were organized and financed by TCWSF to help train students and faculty in officiating techniques of five player basketball and power volleyball.

Increased tournament participation in volleyball and basketball mandated a division of coordinator duties. Harriette Lavenue, Memphis State University was appointed Officials Coordinator for volleyball and Dennis Suiter from Martin, Tennessee held a similar position in basketball. Suiter was the first non-higher education faculty member to hold a position within the Federation. Their duties were to select officials for individual schools when requested and select and assign officials and schedule all games at the respective TCWSF state championship.

The first handbook, 1969-70 was a twenty-one page document published by Bettye Giles. By 1981-82 the final handbook had expanded to ninety-nine pages. Jane Hooker was appointed Handbook Editor by Joan Biddle from the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga during her term of office and served in this capacity for several years. Janice Dunn, Sharon Brown, Charlotte Peterson, and Patricia Bonner also made contributions in editing over the years. The editors were responsible for incorporating all of the revisions in policies and rules into a standardized format, inserting Region II and AIAW policies, editing the final draft, and publishing/distributing the handbook to all members and affilitated organizations.

During 1974-75 a Code of Ethics was added to the guidelines to give direction to administrators, coaches, officials, and students to ensure that all competition was safe and educational. Although there were very few problems relating to violations of rules and policies of the Federation, an Ethics Committee was formed in the same year with Elma Roane of Memphis State University as the first chair. The Ethics Committee heard all cases relating to protests between schools, violations of the code of ethics, violations of rules, policies, and appeals. Because of the amount of paperwork pertaining to the certification of eligibility of participants, any discrepancies or violations related to this carried monetary fines to help discourage late or inappropriate reporting by the member college.

Although the officers had little preparation and limited experiences with the law, they were very concerned about the rights of institutions and individuals. Violations and appeals were held with the strict confidence of the individuals involved. The 1983 Deed of Gift Agreement for the TCWSF Archives included a provision where access to the Ethics Committee files relating to violations was by approval of the Ethics Chairman and was deferred until May, 1986.

TCWSF was now adopting AIAW policies to eliminate discrepancies in rules and regulations among affiliated state, regional, and national organizations. In 1976 TCWSF members were required to be members of AIAW. Only active AIAW members were allowed to participate in TCWSF state championships as of the 1977-78 season. Participants now had to be certified as eligible to compete prior to their first event. Necessary paperwork had to be filed at the state, regional, and national levels. The position of Chairman of Eligibility was created to alleviate the load of the Ethics Committee and to address the need for accurate eligibility certification.

The enormous paper work and numerous hours of recording and verifying eligibility and scholarship were the results of a national structure of competition. The Eligibility Chairman assumed these duties. This work was accomplished without the aid of a computer. Because of the importance of this position and the amount of time required to complete the duties the Federation awarded a nominal honorarium for this service. Patricia Bonner from Milligan College served as the first chairman. The position of Chairman of Eligibility was soon added to the board.

In 1975-76 scholarships based on athletic ability were awarded to females in five TCWSF colleges: East Tennessee State University, gymnastics, volleyball, track; Middle Tennessee State University, basketball, gymnastics, tennis, volleyball; Tennessee Wesleyan, tennis, basketball; Union University, basketball and University of Tennessee, Chattanooga, basketball, tennis, and volleyball. The number of colleges offering scholarships for female athletes and the number of scholarships increased tremendously due to some enforcement of Title IX regulations. With the awarding of athletic scholarships more rules and regulations relating to recruiting were implemented. The Eligibility Chairman and the Ethics Committee worked very closely to keep a handle on possible violations.

Many improvements besides officiating were made in the organization and administration of tournaments. In addressing the diversity of member institutions and differences within the sports, several types of tournaments were offered from pool play in volleyball, A and B divisions in tennis and badminton, and large and small college divisions in basketball. The adoption of a Federation logo, printed tournament programs, all-star certificates, and standardized trophies helped reaffirm that the Federation was a growing viable organization. The press was beginning to give local coverage at the state tournaments when the host college was participating.

State Tournaments were beginning to draw spectators. The officers saw the potential to cover expenses and make a profit for the Federation as well as the tournament host. To capitalize on this market the host college was given incentives such as percentage of gate, profits from t-shirts, and concessions. Although no large profits were realized, hosting a state tournament was becoming more popular. This financial venture helped defray costs for teams who qualified for regional or national tournaments and/or provided funds for the subsequent year's budget.

TCWSF members were concerned about the great distances some colleges had to travel to participate in the tournaments. With this in mind, tournaments in all the sports were structured so that all colleges were guaranteed at least two games/matches before being eliminated. Tournaments were also rotated each year to one of the three grand divisions of the state. Many similar decisions were made where the welfare of all institutions was considered as opposed to vested interests by those at an advanced level of competition and/or those who were more financially solvent.

In 1977-78 active membership in AIAW was required in order to participate in state TCWSF tournaments. Several small former TCWSF institutions did not join AIAW. The members of the Federation were concerned that former sister institutions would not have a culminating state tournament experience when there was ample interest. The Federation offered a non-AIAW division in both tennis and volleyball in 1977-78.

TCWSF sponsored many district and state tournaments over the years. It is appropriate to recognize the first state champion in each of the sports/divisions. In the beginning there was only one division in each type of tournament but as the Federation grew in numbers it also grew in diversity which called for different tournament structures.

AIAW Southern Region Sport Committees were organized in 1978-79 and were composed of coaches from each of the five state associations including Tennessee, Kentucky, Virginia, North Carolina, and South Carolina. These committees helped formulate regional tournament policies, tournament structure, and seeding procedures in each sport. Prior to this the only formal input into regional matters was through the respective state president who served on the Southern Region II Executive Board or by attendance at the regional Representative Assembly.

In order to increase communication among members between biannual governing board meetings, representative assemblies, and tournaments, Jane Hooker initiated a TCWSF Newsletter during her presidency that was published several times a year. The newsletter contained tournament, AIAW and Regional information, announcements pertaining to clinics, workshops, conferences, and tournament deadlines and results, etc. Sharon Brown, Maryville College continued this practice during her presidency. These newsletters provided much of the history of the Federation.

After the AIAW ceased operation, the TCWSF voted to dissolve the state organization in April 1983. An initial $1500 grant to organize the TCWSF Archives was approved. The remaining TCWSF funds were divided among member institutions. Jane Hooker, Historian, was asked to serve as the liaison between TCWSF and the Mississippi Valley Collection Special Collections at Memphis State University. Elma Roane and Jane Hooker were directed to manage and disburse the grant allocation. Additional grant money was received from Southern Region AIAW funds after that organization was dissolved. The members voted to use the remaining funds money to complete the TCWSF Archives and for Jane Hooker to publish a permanent guide to the collection. The library finding aid, archives guide was published in 1990 and was distributed to all former TCWSF institutions and officers. Additional copies were sent to the Southern Region AIAW Archives housed at Eastern Kentucky University and the National AIAW Archives housed at the University of Maryland.

Many great athletes and coaches came from the programs that were developed during this period. They are too numerous to mention but one in particular should be recognized. Pat Head Summitt, a member of the University of Tennessee, Martin's basketball team that won the first TCWSF state championship also played on the first women's U.S. Olympic basketball team in 1976. Summitt coached the 1984 U.S. women's Olympic gold medal basketball team, and has won two NCAA national basketball championships as coach of the University of Tennessee Lady Vols.

The Tennessee College Women's Sports Federation was born out of a vision of physical educators that the collegiate experience should include organized sports for females. These pioneer women believed that competition was good for women, could be an educational experience, and should receive recognition and financial support from the administration. Although the TCWSF was short lived it served a vital role in the establishment of intercollegiate sports for women in Tennessee and the south. It was also instrumental in spearheading the movement for equality in sports for the female athlete. The officers, coaches, officials, and administrators will be remembered for their dedication, personal sacrifices, both professional and financial, and their commitment to make the world of sport more enjoyable and accessible to females.
